To whom it may concern,

A little more than two years ago I suffered a debilitating, and extremely painful episode of Sciatica, which resulted from the compression of a nerve by two herniated discs in my lower back. Back pain was nothing new to me as I had been suffering from it for years. When I brought the issue up with my GP, his answer was to prescribe pain relievers, and muscle relaxers. Then, on the day I was taken to the hospital after suffering the onset of Sciatica, the neurologist whom the hospital recommended prescribed pain relievers and muscle relaxers.

About three weeks later, I hobbled with my crutches into a bank, and the customer on the next line said, "do you have a chiropractor. "No," I answered, "should I?" The fellow replied, "I do." The teller looked up and smiled, "I do too." Then another customer said, "I don't know where I'd be without mine."

That afternoon I saw an ad on TV by Dr. Laubach.

So I called and made an appointment. I should stress, I was still in so much pain at that point I couldn't sleep for more than an hour at a time. But Dr. Laubach, after looking at the results of my tests, put his hand on my shoulder and said, "David, I can help you." The very next day I began a course of decompression treatments, on a device I jokingly called the "torture rack," (although it didn't hurt much at all). Four days a week I came. When I was well enough to walk he sized up one of the problems, and gave me a lift for the shoe of my right foot. For the first time in my life I began to walk without a limp.

I can not say enough about Dr. Laubach--- Dr. Nathan as he prefers to be called, nor about his wife Dr. Beth. I feel better now than I have at any time in quite a while. I can even stand in one position for ten or fifteen minutes without noticing any pain in my back---a miracle for sure.

Finally, a visit for treatment is like coming to spend a few pleasant moments among good friends. And I always feel better afterwards.
